WOODSON WINS

Mandamus Issued to Require Registrar to Allow Books to Be Copied.

FOR USE IN LIQUOR ELECTION

Lynchburg Citizen Wishes Data to Be Used on Election Day.

The Supreme Court of Appeals yeaterday granted the petition of J. C. Woodson, of Lynchburg, for a mandamus to compel W. B. Stanley, a registrar in that city to allow Woodson to make a copy of his books.

The application grew out of the pending local option fight in Lynchburg, Stanley having refused the request, and a petition of Woodson laving later been denied by the Corparation Court. The mandamus is fareign from the city of the present in the contract of the present in the present in the present of the petition of the plaintiff to said answer and arguments of counted, being of opinion that a mandamus ought to issue, requiring the respondent to permit the petitioner to examine the registration books of the said presence of the respondent, memoranda or notes, such as are proper to be made, according the respondent to permit the petitioner to examine the registration books of the said preserved by the elerks of the several counties within the State, if is, therefore, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded the petitioner, considered that a peremptory mandamus be awarded to petit the petitioner to avail the pol
